Why city park facts?

The Trust for Public Land's Center for City Park Excellence works to make cities more successful through the renewal and creation of parks for their social, ecological, and economic benefits to residents and visitors alike. To achieve this mission, we believe that residents, advocates, park professionals, planners, members of the media, decision-makers, and all those who love parks need solid data that elucidates the realities of urban park and recreation systems. Data is knowledge, and knowledge is power.

The 2017 edition of City Park Facts includes photos for the first time, as well as an infographic spread to further highlight some of the data collected herein. It also features an expanded table (Table 6) showing the percentage of residents within a 10-minute (half mile) walk of a park, up from 75 cities in 2016 to 100 cities this year. This metric is generated by the Trust for Public Land's ParkScore analysis, which evaluates how large cities are meeting the need for parks and recreation. The latest rankings are available at parkscore.tpl.org, and are updated each year in May.

Additional datasets not included in the printed version of City Park Facts are available at tpl.org/cityparkfacts. The Center for City Park Excellence has an extensive library of reports on best practices and trending topics in urban park systems; for a full bibliography, visit tpl.org/CCPE.

How to use this booklet

When we say "city," we mean only the municipality, not the metropolitan region. Thus, "Los Angeles" means the city of Los Angeles, not greater Los Angeles, nor Los Angeles County. However, several cities that are included in greater Los Angeles—Long Beach, Anaheim, Santa Ana, and Irvine—happen to be large enough to merit separate inclusion in this booklet and are listed under their own names.

When we say "park" we are referring to publicly owned and operated parks. In Table 1, we count every kind of park within the municipal boundary of the city, including federal, state, county, regional, and municipal parks. We do not include parks in corporate plazas, private clubs, or homeowner association parks in gated communities.

In most reports we combine the data from all the different park agencies in the city. In a few reports we separate parks by their managing agency, sometimes omitting the various smaller, specialized agencies in a city.

When we say "operating spending" we mean year-in, year-out work such as landscape and tree maintenance, facility maintenance, trash removal, recreational programming, planning, administration, policing, lighting, marketing, etc. "Capital spending" refers to one-time items such as land acquisition, construction, and major road or structural repairs. In order to provide greater uniformity between agencies, we do not count the expenses associated with zoos, aquariums, professional sports stadiums, museums, and cemeteries, which exist in some cities' parks but not others'. In Table 7 and Table 8, total spending includes both operational spending and capital spending. As in 2016, we have included separate information (Table 15) on spending by the largest city park conservancies, a growing category of nonprofit groups that support public parks.

For certain tables, we group cities by their average population density (population divided by municipal land area). We exclude airports, railyards, and parkland—the uninhabited portions of a city—from land area when calculating density. The four density categories are based on standard deviations from the mean.

We want to hear from you.

City Park Facts is a collaboration between the many city, county, state and nonprofit parks agencies and conservancies that work with us to submit their data. The staff of the Center for City Park Excellence works to present this information in a thorough yet easy-to-use format, and your feedback is important for future editions. You can contact us at ccpe@tpl.org or 617-367-6200.

Many city agencies, such as Denver Parks and Recreation and Albuquerque Parks and Recreation Department, have parkland that falls outside the limits of their city. A table detailing this external acreage can be found at tpl.org/cityparkfacts.

2. Parkland as percentage of adjusted city area

2016

Parkland includes city, county, metro, state, and federal parkland within the city limits. Adjusted city area subtracts airport and railyard acreage from total city land area.

6. Percent of city population with walkable park access

2016

Park access is the ability to reach a publicly owned park within a half mile walk on the road network, unobstructed by freeways, rivers, fences, and other obstacles. For methodology, detailed analysis, and maps of cities' park-poor areas, visit parkscore.org.

7. Spending on parks and recreation per resident by city

MOST RECENTLY REPORTED FISCAL YEAR

Total spending includes both operating and capital spending of all park agencies in the city, but excludes professional stadiums, zoos, museums, aquariums, and cemeteries. If a city has more than one agency, expenditures are combined. For a more detailed listing of fiscal year data by city, visit tpl.org/cityparkfacts.

8. Spending on parks and recreation by city, reflecting primary agency spending and price of living

MOST RECENTLY REPORTED FISCAL YEAR

Total spending includes both operating and capital spending by all park agencies in the city, but excludes professional sports stadiums, zoos, museums, aquariums, and cemeteries. If a city has more than one agency, expenditures are combined. For a more detailed listing of fiscal year data by city, visit tpl.org/cityparkfacts.

The adjusted spending reflecting price of living is calculated using the Center for Neighborhood Technology Housing and Transportation Affordability Index. Price of living is based on median housing and transportation costs.

Boston, Cincinnati, New Orleans, and Washington, D.C. have two primary city park agencies.

9. Designed and natural parkland by city

2016

Designed areas are parklands that have been created, constructed, planted, and managed primarily for human use. They include playgrounds, neighborhood parks, sports fields, plazas, boulevards, municipal golf courses, municipal cemeteries, and all areas served by roadways, parking lots, and service buildings.

Natural and undeveloped areas are either pristine or reclaimed lands that are left largely undisturbed and managed for their ecological value (i.e., wetlands, forests, deserts). While they may have trails and occasional benches, they are not developed for any recreation activities beyond walking, running, and cycling.

15. Spending by selected urban park conservancies

2016

Conservancies, nonprofit organizations that financially support public parks, are an increasingly popular park management model. Spending data for this sample is taken from a Trust for Public Land survey and the organizations' 2016 IRS filings. It includes both operating and capital expenditures.

16. Largest parks

2016

These are the largest parks located within the boundaries of the 100 largest U.S. cities. Most are owned by the municipality, but some are owned by a state, a county, a regional agency, or the federal government. If a park extends beyond the boundary of the city, only the acreage within the city is noted here.
