Health and Physical Education (BS)

<https://www.lockhaven.edu/hped/>

The Health and Physical Education program will prepare students to teach grades K-12 or work in several fields, from coaching and aquatics to facilitating health and wellness programs in correctional settings. This degree's concentration includes teacher certification, PE and sports in Correctional settings, aquatics, and Coaching. Students complete their teaching methods courses in one of three gymnasium spaces. Health and Physical Education students complete field experiences in PK-12 schools during freshman year and are expected to engage in practical teaching experiences each semester in which they plan and implement their own lessons related to courses in which they are enrolled. The Teacher Education program provides students with a Professional Semester of blocked classes during the fall of the senior year. Graduates often find jobs in education, health and fitness facilities, sport settings, correctional facilities, or as aquatics program administrators.

Recreation Management (BS)

<https://www.lockhaven.edu/recmanagement/>

The Recreation Management program at Lock Haven University balances the theoretical and practical learning experiences to prepare you for a successful and rewarding career in recreation, parks, tourism, fitness, strength and conditioning, therapeutic recreation, and related fields. Students can choose between the Cultural Heritage Management Track and the Adventure Leadership and Outdoor Recreation Track.

The Cultural Heritage Management degree program addresses the skill sets needed by people working in the heritage tourism industry by combining a curriculum that prepares students with entrepreneurial and business skills, computer-aided design capability, and the material and cultural history expertise to operate effectively with public agencies, private entrepreneurs, local beverage industry, adventure and outdoor operations, and other state and federal agencies. The Outdoor Management Track is designed to prepare students for careers in camp administration, state and national parks, environmental interpretation, outdoor education, adventure programming, scouting, or wildlife conservation. Students will acquire a mix of natural science, programming theory, and resource management skills to understand, use, and preserve our nation's natural resources. After completing the degree requirements, you will be prepared for immediate employment or admittance into a graduate degree program. Additional course work in Therapeutic Recreation will enable students to emphasize this track of study.
